INTRODUCTION

- Connection is one of the important indicators of globalization.
- Sumedang as one of the cities in West Java Province recorded past connections.
- Cultural traces in Sumedang start from the prehistoric, Islamic, and later periods.
- Archaeological data show that there are interesting things in the Islamic period, especially traces of tombs
- This paper emphasizes the development of Islam in Sumedang, starting during the Sumedang Larang Kingdom, and continuing under the influence of Islamic Mataram until the Colonial period.

LITERATURE REVIEW

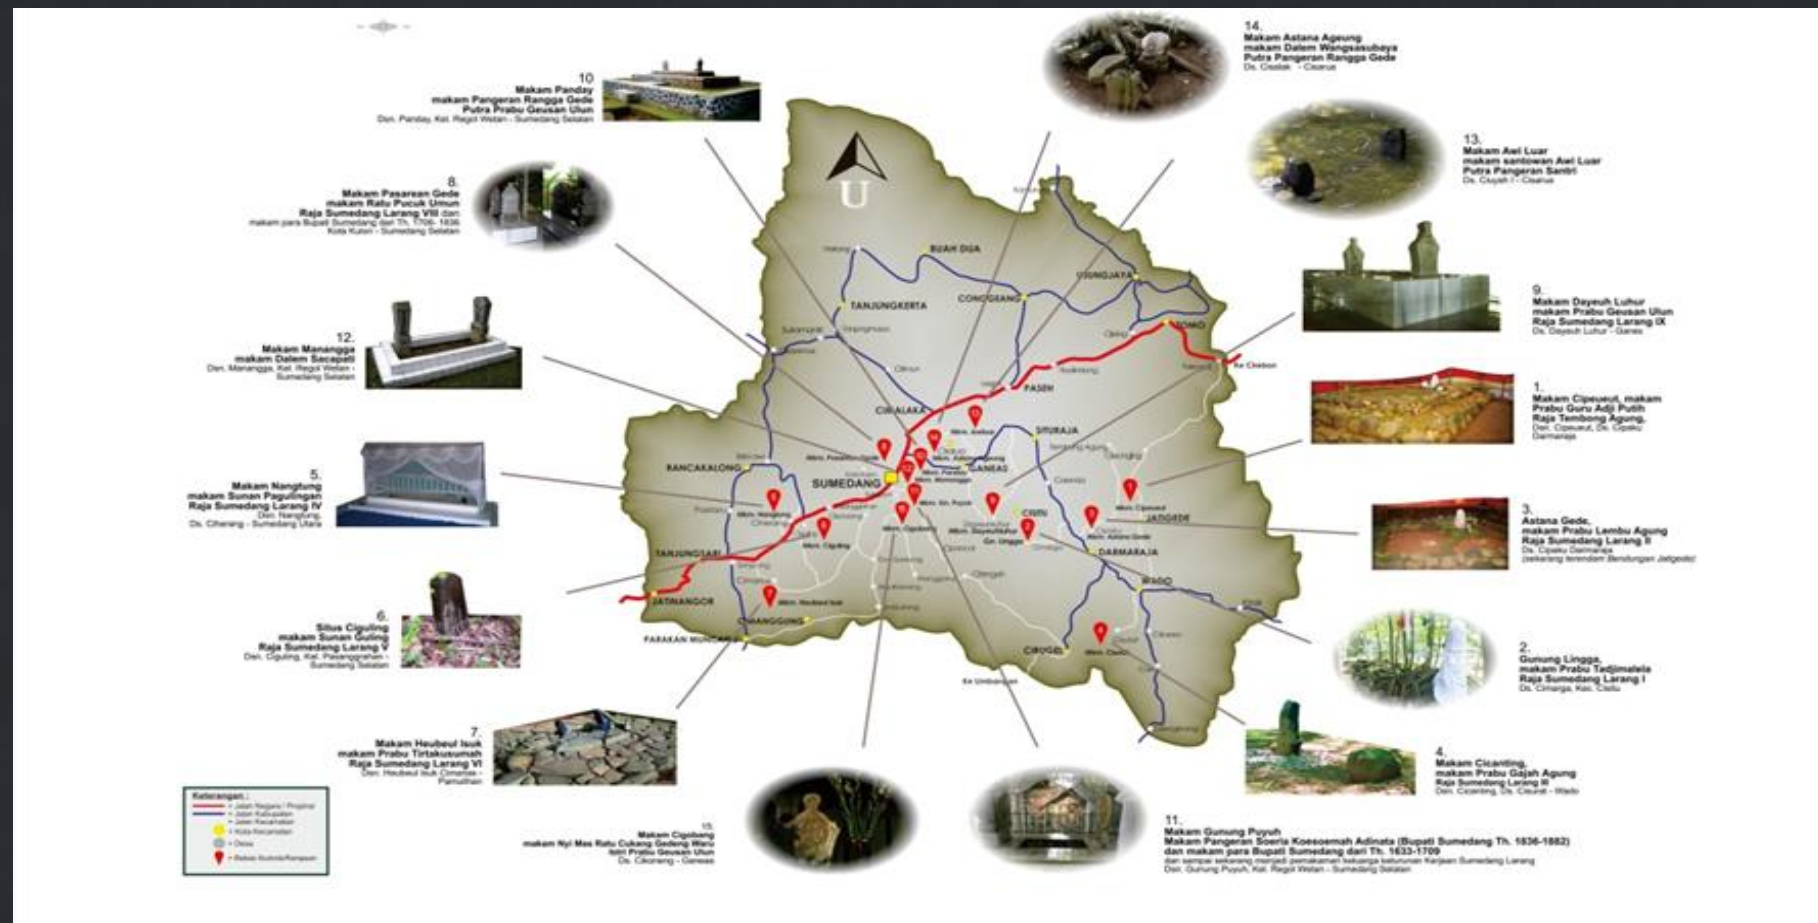

- The development of government and power in Sumedang (Herlina, 2008; Ishak, 2015)
- Sumedang Islamic tombs, typology, and origin of influence (Abbas, 1984; Ambary, 1998; Ishak, 2015; Latifundia, 2016; Nurhakim, 1990; Saptono, 2016; Widyastuti, 2019)

METHOD

- A descriptive-analytic approach
- The study tried to look for characteristic patterns observed in Islamic period objects, especially tombs in Sumedang
- Which is more dominant, anything that still survives, and what forms of cultural expression describe the dialogue that is visible both physically (tangible) and nonphysical (intangible).

FINDING AND DISCUSSION

INFLUENCE OF ISLAMIC MATARAM

Gravestone/Nisan in Banyusumurup Complex, Imogiri

CONCLUSION

- During the Islamic period, connections between Sumedang and other regions influenced the shape and type of the ruler's tomb
- The placement of tombs and tomb markers (gravestones) in the past still shows continuity with the mindset of pre-Islamic society.
- Tombs can show the dynamics of politics/government in Sumedang Regency.
- Knowledge of the forms of relationships between Sumedang and other regions is expected to build maturity in interacting in an increasingly pluralistic society.
