The mean score of Personalized Learning Benefits Indicators

Open-ended questionnaire & Students' self-assessment and reflections:

- EFL students admitted that they benefited from implementing personalized learning instruction while working on three project-based activities: problem-solving, critical thinking, time management, collaboration with peers and teacher (feedback, resource sharing), creativity, and depth understanding.
- EFL students could identify their strengths, interests, preferences, needs, and weaknesses when completing the three project-based activities.
- Implementing personalized learning instruction enhanced student agency, particularly in personalizing learning steps in the Genius Hour project. This project required students to develop an e-module for teaching English.

Challenges of Personalized Learning Instruction in EFL Classroom

- 1 = lack of administrator support
- 2 = pressure to cover specific material
- 3 = lack of data
- 4 = lack of flexibility in curriculum
- 5 = scheduling constraints
- 6 = limited experience with school choice provision
- 7 = time management
- 8 = tasks and assignments submission
- 9 = provide assistance during collaborative works
- 10 = late feedback
- 11 = technical problems
- 12 = understand the instruction

Open-ended questionnaire & students' self-assessment and reflections:

- EFL students faced some challenges regarding time management (late submission), searching for resources and applications, working with peers (late feedback), understanding the instruction, and brainstorming ideas.
- The present study also reported time management as the most consistent challenge.
